Dear Resident

We are writing to inform you about the rapid decline in our severely endangered hedgehogs. This problem has been exacerbated by numerous factors; as a community if we don't act swiftly, hedgehogs may be a thing of the past for Britain. I hope you carry on reading this and act upon our suggestions.

One of the predominant reasons for this prompt decline is the unavailability of our immaculate gardens. A 13x13cm hole in our fences prevents the hedgehogs passing away on the roadside and access their vital food source. If, as a community, we all create such a hole, hedgehogs may just survive this colossal decrease. The advantages of this hole can also annihilate garden pests such as slugs.

Another suggestion is to create a hedgehog house which could prevent the excruciating end of hedgehogs in Britain. If we all create a hedgehog home, hedgehogs can shelter and hibernate safely. If we also leave cat food and lukewarm water inside these luscious homes, hedgehogs can find their way to safety.

An extremely common problem which may apply to you and others is if you use lethal slug pellets to eradicate slugs and other common garden pests, you are contributing to 1000's of hedgehog's end. These perilous pest-killers are unneeded for your pristine garden as hedgehogs can eliminate them for free and gathering essential foods for hibernation.

I hope that you thoroughly consider some of my suggestions and increase the chances of hedgehog's survival. It is a sad fact that hedgehogs are decreasing quicker than Siberian tigers, if we act upon these three suggestions we can avoid hedgehogs extinction from Britain.

Yours sincerely, Grewelthorpe CofE primary.
